Atlantis AV Solutions, has broadened and developed its business significantly within the last year, taking it some way from its original roots of its unique “metamorphic frames” started in the late 90’s

In response to many requests for information, particularly from Interior Designers, Atlantis today has made its new web site “live”.

The web site showcases much of the company’s work split now into two operating divisions:

- Its unmistakable frames business, with an even broader range of art from which to select
- Its fast-developing AV business, where more clients have been approaching Atlantis to project manage many of their broader audio visual and home entertainment projects.

From feedback obtained at last year’s Decorex Show, Atlantis realised that there was a large gap of knowledge across many Interior Design Practices concerning what can and cannot be done in the larger area of audio visual and home entertainment.

On the one hand, few companies if any have the breadth and depth of experience which Atlantis has in the area of home entertainment and audio visual, on the other, many designers run shy of the whole electronic area since they felt know one really “held the high ground” in this complex area.

Take a gap of knowledge and a full service company able to fill that gap, and with over 10 years experience in servicing the needs of Interior Designers in the UK and abroad, Atlantis will be happy to advise on all aspects of technology concerning the home, office or hotel a
Quotes Hugh Roche, Managing Director of Atlantis:

“Our new web site more accurately describes our business today, and allows Interior Designers to view our breadth of work. We have an important news section, which will be up-dated regularly.”
